

Card Chosen Through The Window by Salvador Olivera - Video - DOWNLOAD

A card chosen by a spectator is torn from a corner for later identification, this card is lost in the center of the deck, and this is stored in its case, behind the window you can see a wide piece of colored tape, the case where the card has been kept is passed through the window and miraculously you can see a card that is missing a piece of a corner, the spectator who has had the corner in his possession all along. You can see and corroborate that it is the card chosen by him and that was introduced into the case moments before, you can also see how this card has crossed the case and the window passing behind the glass, no elastic flap, no elastic threads, no invisible threads.

Ingenious gimmick does all the work for you, very easy to do
