
White Lies by Paul Carnazzo

White Lies is a fun lie detector routine disguised as a game card from a fictitious game called "Little White Lies".

The card lists some common "White Lies". A spectator mentally selects one of the lies and decides whether to lie or tell the truth about some details regarding this lie.

Amazingly, the performer is able to correctly identify whether the participant is lying or telling the truth and which lie they've selected.

White Lies uses a different method from our other "Lie Detector" cards, "Perjury" and "Detection".

No math!
