

---

The Inversion Holder by David Penn & TCC

Producing a piece of fruit is considered one of the best ways to end a stand-up Cups and Balls routine. However, carrying the fruit in a jacket pocket can be bulky and obvious, especially for magicians who wear slim-fit suits.

Here comes The Inversion Holder - a hidden weapon designed by David Penn, a seasoned expert in performing the Cups and Balls routines in a strolling environment. Ergonomically designed to correspond to the human waistline, it perfectly conceals the fruit or final loads behind your back, remaining completely invisible when worn.

Constructed from high-tensile steel, the Inversion Holder is a stable, durable, and long-lasting accessory. The steel undergoes professional fabrication, bending, hand-welding, grinding, and painting, providing a secure grip on the fruit during performances.

It can be rotated to adjust to different angles and is convenient for both left- and right-handed. Multiple holders can be used together, and it comes with rubber bands to secure fruit or final load of various sizes.

The Inversion Holder allows you to achieve a natural and smooth motion when retrieving the fruit or final loads, making it an ideal solution for magicians, especially those who wear slim-fit suits. It eliminates the bulk typically associated with carrying fruit in a pocket and provides a seamless performance.

Features

- Stable, durable, and long-lasting
- Ergonomically designed to fit the human waistline
- Enables a natural and smooth movement

What's included:

- The Inversion Holder
- Rubber Bands for securing fruit or final load of various sizes
- Online tutorial by David Penn