High Roller Coaster

The serial number of a borrowed bill is written on a coaster. This bill vanishes magically. After a guessing game with the coasters, the bill appears inside the coaster with its serial number written on it. Andi Gladwin wrote: "It's an almost-impromptu trick that is perfect for bar magicians or impromptu performances."

Word of The Day

A favorite of Fritz: your word of the day and the participant's word of the day switch places in a magical way. Ravi Mayar called it a piece of incredible magic.

Who Wants to Be a Millionaire?

A funny, interactive, motivated routine with money. This is Fritz's preference to get donations when performing bar magic.

King of my Castle

Inspired by Chris Mayhew and Luke Dancy, this entertaining routine is a handling of the Sandwich plot but with a twist.

Mont(e) Blanc

Designed for the strolling magician, Fritz shares a Monte routine that you can adapt to any occasion (including an impossible finale).

Coin-Fusion Redux

Two coins are signed and fused together. A practical approach to this plot -- John

Late Night Aces

Did you say you wanted another amazing Four Ace production? This is a fun way to introduce a four of a kind.

W.T.F. A.K.A. Walk around Travelers Finale

Four cards are signed and lost in the deck. One at a time, they are found in a fair way, with an ending you didn't see coming.

Voodoo

A participant holds your business card. You burn and tear another one of your business cards. As in traditional voodoo, the participant's business card has a burn and a tear in the exact same place as yours. Spooky...

The End

This is the closer of Fritz's Magic Castle act. An impressive multiple selection and revelation with a surprising finish!
