
Torn Card Evolution (TCE) by Juan Pablo

What if it was possible that you could tear the corner of a card the same every time?

No tools or gimmicks required

Imagine the effects you will perform with a duplicate corner that matches every time!

One of the most powerful techniques in card magic is the "torn corner technique." A playing card is selected, one corner is torn off and kept by the spectator, then the rest of the card is destroyed. The playing card can be burnt, torn up, vanished or whatever you wish!

Then the magician draws attention to a window, and stuck on the outside of the window is a playing card - the spectator's card! It's now totally restored. All but the corner... that the spectator has been holding the whole time!

And certainly - you don't have to use a window as the final resting place. You can have the playing card reappear ANYWHERE!

Inside an orange or lemon

Locked in a safe

Inside a sealed envelope sent previously to your spectator

Inside a block of ice

Buried in a bottle in the back yard

The options are endless!

Torn corner cards remove the need for any equipment, or gimmicks to come into play. The card really is torn and the spectator can even finish the rip! Easy, clean, simple and practical. The spectator selects a playing card, you tear the corner, allowing your spectator to complete the tear. The spectator holds onto the torn corner and the rest of the card is destroyed or vanished.

Torn corner playing cards allow you to do so many versions of classic card magic without the limitations of sleight of hand or complex preshow set ups. You can now easily perform any effect that has a selected card torn to pieces only to reappear, missing its corner that was held onto by your spectator. The restored card can appear in any impossible location!

There are so so many effects you can do using Torn Corner Evolution!
