

Sitta Traffic Light Silk set

The magician shows a silk with the design of a traffic light, but the three lights are missing. Question, "Who knows what this is? Right, it's a traffic light but... what's missing? Still right, the three important colored lights that are in every traffic light are missing. What are the colors? (showing the red silk). That's right, red. Does red mean pass? Certainly not, red means stop, when you see the red light you must always stop. What color is this? (showing the yellow silk). That's right, this yellow color is very important. What does yellow mean...does it mean running like crazy? No, it means being careful, taking your time, looking around, and making sure no vehicle is coming. And finally, what color is this? (showing the green silk). Well, it's green. And what does the green light tell you? Correct, green tells you it's the right time to cross the street.

Now we take all three colors and the traffic light and put them in this magic bag." While stuffing the silks into the bag, the yellow silk (accidentally, but actually on purpose) falls to the floor. "A small magical gesture and the traffic light appears with all three colors in the right order: green, yellow and red! Wait a minute, what happened to the yellow light?" The children will start shouting to point out that you have dropped the yellow silk on the floor. You see it on the floor, you pick it up, and you put the yellow silk and the traffic light again in your bag. Again a magical gesture and you pull out the complete traffic light with its colored lights, red, yellow and green!
