DVK

stands for... Dela Vs. Koran

I have ALWAYS used a Koran forcing deck... of which there are a few variations, each with its own name.

The version I present to you is technically a Koran 101 Deck (aka 5 Star Prediction Deck).

They are only "rough for now"... I hope to make a more professional set in the future... These do the job though for now...

This is a very special pack of cards that will force one of 4 different playing cards. Each 'stack' of 4 cards is repeated down the deck with an indifferent playing card between each one.

This means that the cards can be dealt 'face up' on a table and no one will see the force cards repeating!

This is because there are EIGHT different cards dealt between each set of two identical force cards. No one pays attention to every card dealt and they especially don't remember what they saw 'eight cards earlier'.

Each of the 4 force cards appears in the deck 6 times.

The other AMAZING thing about this set up is that you can spread the deck (face up) on a table, or between your hands and yet the audience can't focus quickly enough to make out the repeated cards! It's mind-blowing how fair and convincing this is.

The 4 Force Cards are...

- Jack of Spades
- 3 of Hearts
- 8 of Clubs
- 5 of Diamonds

The most basic routine... and, the one I use the most is this...
