

Silk to Egg by Michael Ammar

A classic sucker trick with an impossible twist. The silk turns into an egg, the secret is revealed... but the egg is real, and the silk reappears from the magician's forehead. A powerful routine taught by Michael Ammar.

One of the greatest sucker tricks in contemporary magic. This effect was even performed by the legendary Lance Burton in one of his television specials—testament to its impact and quality.

EFFECT - The magician displays a red handkerchief and announces a miracle is about to happen. Slowly and deliberately, the handkerchief is pushed into the left hand... and inexplicably transforms into an egg.

The secret seems obvious: it's a hollow white egg. With a relaxed, playful tone, the magician proceeds to reveal the method step by step, showing how the silk is hidden inside the egg.

But just as the audience thinks they've figured it out, the real surprise begins: the magician removes the hole from the egg, places it on his forehead, cracks the egg open—proving it's a real one. And as a final impossibility, he pulls the vanished handkerchief from the hole now on his forehead, leaving the audience completely stunned.

A brilliant routine that blends comedy, surprise, and an impossible finish.

Includes:

- 1 brown egg;
- 1 white egg;
- 2 red silks (45 x 45 cm);
- 20 stickers;
- Access to online video instructions by Michael Ammar.

Perfect for parlor magic, close-up, or television. A timeless routine that works for all audiences and always ends with strong reactions.