

Coffee Break by Michel

The magician shows a coffee can. The audience clearly sees that it contains real coffee. It is displayed from every angle, including the lid, everything looks perfectly ordinary. The can is then closed.

The magician talks about how popular latte art is today, and then introduces several cards, each showing a different latte art design: a heart, a smile, a spiral, a star, and more. The spectator freely selects one.

You then ask the spectator to imagine drawing their chosen image on the coffee, as if tracing it with their finger in the sand.

When the can is opened again, the impossible happens: the chosen design is now visible in the coffee itself. And yes, you can pour out all the coffee from the can at the end.

Simple, logical, and incredibly visual.

Highlights:

- The can and lid are shown openly.
- Use your own coffee.
- The spectator can pour out and examine all the coffee.
- Direct and highly visual.
- Ultra-easy to perform.
- Perfect for close-up, social media, and casual performances.
