

Crazy Washing Machine by George Iglesias and Twister Magic

Imagine a portable mini washing machine that will instantly do your laundry! But you better read the instructions if not, things can go wrong!

Inspired by the classic trick Soft Soap created in 1942 by Dr. Howard B. Kayton, George Iglesias has taken this magic trick and completely reinvented it, changing not only the story, elements and the plot, but also the method, a new and very deceptive system that will leave everyone thinking. A playful and powerful routine for children, that is full of magic, fun and lots of laughs!

Effect:

The magician says he has just bought a new portable washing machine online. Then, he presents some items to be washed: a red, a yellow tie stained, and a white glove.

He places the red sock inside, next, he tries to read the machine's instructions, but they are printed in a different language. He attempts to figure it out how to make it work on his own. He asks a child to push the start button, as soon as he does, the box and the magician start to shake until a stop. When the magician takes the red sock out, he find out is clean, but wait, guess what? The sock is now full of holes! Oh no!

Undeterred, he continues and places the yellow tie inside. A child presses the button again, and the machine starts to work. However, when the tie is removed from the box, it has shrunk! Oh no, again!

Finally, he inserts the white glove, and the button is pressed one last time. This time, the glove comes out very clean, but as it is pulled out of the box, the kids burst into laughter-they realize that the glove has stretched, becoming super, super long!

At the end of the trick, all three items can be fully examinable and to everyone's surprise, the magician opens the box and shows it completely empty from the inside!
