

Framed

Show an envelope with a prediction inside and have a spectator choose a card from a deck. Open the envelope and inside you will find a transparent frame on which all 52 cards that make up a deck are printed, therefore the prediction is correct. In fact, in the frame there is (also) the chosen card! This gag will amuse your audience.

The spectator will then notice the position of the chosen card and will have to cover the frame with his hand in that spot. After a moment he will remove it and only one card will appear face down: that chosen one! Turning the frame upside down, the audience will see, with amazement, that the card is exactly that one!

This is a more inexpensive version of Ton Onosaka's original "Frame-up". The quality is still very good and the frame well made. Ideal, therefore, for those who want to save a little while still having a good product.

- No skill is required. The effect is automatic.
- The trick requires no preparation and is ready immediately for use.
- The trick is very ingenious and enclosed entirely in the frame.
- The frame can be examined by the audience and measures 22 x 16 cm
