Dreams often mirror fragments of past memories. We've utilized lenticular printing technology to create a time-space corridor on the deck.

As you hold it and turn it against the light, the figure of an elder gradually appears in front of the seemingly empty girl.

At first, it's as if there are layers of hazy veils in between. But as the light shifts, the figure becomes clearer and clearer, as if walking step by step from the distant memories into the reality.
