

Twin Fire by Cahyo

From the old principal "Once A head" and a tribute to Alan Warner.

Two duplicate sets of five ESP SYMBOLS are tipped out of from beautiful wooden box. A spectator is given one set of the symbol the performer retains the other. The performer places one of his wooden symbol face-down in one of the compartments, then the spectator freely chooses a symbol from his set and places it face-up in the other compartment. This continues, turn and turnabout, until both sets of symbols are once more back in the box.

The performer then tips out the symbols into two piles; he removes the top one from each pile and places them side by side on the table, then continues to do the same thing with each pair in turn.

One of the symbol which are face-down is now turned over by the performer to reveal the symbol on its reverse side. Magically, it's all matches.

ALL FIVE SYMBOLS ARE MATCH!

NOTE: The performer places his symbol in the box in every instance BEFORE the spectator makes his choice.

The spectator has a COMPLETELY FREE CHOICE.
